Foundiougne is a department located in the Fatick region, in the central western part of Senegal

It is crossed by the Saloum River, which gives it a unique and natural charm.

One of its most remarkable landmarks is the NELSON MANDELA BRIDGE, a long and modern structure that connects Foundiougne to other towns, making travels easier while offering a stunning view of the river. The department is also surrounded by several small islands, which add to its beauty and are known for their peace, tranquility, and rich biodiversity.

These islands, part of the Saloum delta, are classified as UNESCO World Heritage sites. The area is home to mangroves, many bird species, and preserved natural landscapes, making it ideal for eco-tourism. The local population is warm and welcoming, proud of their cultural heritage. Foundiougne is a place where nature, culture, and tranquility meet – a perfect destination for those who love authentic and peaceful environments.
